The Building of Specialized Units

The historical make up of security relies more than ever on professional security units that can operationally prevent, neutralize and deter criminal and terrorist activities. These units must have the operational skills to overcome growing and challenging modes of criminal and terrorist activities.

Special units have developed into a primary source of national security entities whose main goal is protecting domestic and international state interests. This objective can only be achieved through field experience combined with equipment development that is managed by skillful manpower.

Condor offers a course in Building of Specialized Units which is officially recognized by the Israeli Ministry of Defense.

Condor has all the necessary facilities to instruct courses in Israel. These facilities include vast equipment, firing ranges, training camps, weapons, combat equipment, conference rooms, simulation centers, accomodation and all the logistical infrastructure required.

These topics are listed in a generalized order and are not in a chronological order. The list does not include sub topics. Condor specializes in the building of special units in the following areas:
