Heads of Security Departments

The management and implementation of security regulations and doctrines is the base to effective policy making for nations, governments, law enforcement agencies, multinationals and corporate organizations. These institutions must be led by professional security departments that are managed by professionals that have the operational skills for dealing with the growing and dynamic challenges facing societies.

Consequently, the security department becomes the primary entity whose only objective is preventing and neutralizing all threats against the respective organization and its manpower.

Condor offers a course for heads of security departments which is officially recognized by the Israeli Ministry of Defense.

Condor has all the necessary facilities to instruct courses in Israel. These facilities include vast equipment, firing ranges, training camps, weapons, combat equipment, conference rooms, simulation centers, accommodation and all the logistical infrastructure required.
